FORM/FUTURE – Transformation by Design

International Design Conference

When: Thursday, 10 September 2026

Where: Tempelhof Airport Berlin, Main Hall

Press Release, 26 May 2026

Our world is undergoing fundamental change. In organizations, in working processes, in the way we live together. Structures that functioned for decades are being called into question. Values we relied on are being renegotiated.

For design, change is an everyday task. Designers and design managers create value across industries, accompanying innovation and the shaping of futures across disciplines. They build bridges between brands, products and people. In doing so, they play a decisive role in shaping new business models, experiences and our environment.

On 10 September 2026, the international design conference FORM/FUTURE will explore, under the theme "Process & Principles", how design can drive systemic change in business, society and politics.

The conference is aimed at everyone who engages with transformation: companies and leaders rethinking structures. Designers who want to make a strategic impact. Institutions looking for new forms of collaboration. And everyone who wants not to manage change, but to shape it.

With keynotes, panels, master classes and pop-up experiences, FORM/FUTURE creates a space for encounter and a programme that puts new processes and applicable tools at its centre.

Tempelhof Airport is the largest listed building in Europe. Never finished, always in flux, always under debate. A place that reflects the ambivalences of a city and lives them every day. Not an accidental venue for a conference about processes and principles.

In 2026, Berlin celebrates 20 years as a UNESCO City of Design — the first city in Europe to receive this designation. FORM/FUTURE is part of this anniversary. As a format that demonstrates what an expanded understanding of design can achieve in business, society and politics.
